The Government of India have expressed their opinion that while it Question of Agene s not for the interest of Government, on account -- of the cost of management, to divide the railways of India among Companies in shorter lengths than 500 miles, it is not on the other hand expedient to entrust to any one Company more than 1,000 miles. The concession of the proposed extension through Rajpootana to Delhi and Agra, to the Baroda Railway Company would increase the length of their lines with the branches that must sooner or later be constructed in Guzerat to about 1,000 miles. There is consequently no objection to the grant of the concession to that Company on the grounds deprecated by the Government of India, but tliere are objections due partly to...
