In the summer-time, Willie took it with him to the country, where he had many good times with his kite. This story may be told when the children have paper-folding and make the kite. The square of paper lies cornerways before the child, after the diagonal fold has been made for a guide. Now the right and left edges are folded to meet at this central fold; a piece of worsted is sewed through the sharp angle, and the kite is completed. Older children call this a trapezium. SPRINGTIME. When gentle Spring comes smiling, Old winter flies away; His snowy-cloak he wraps in haste, He dares no longer stay; Then all the seeds that are buried deep In their dark and chilly beds Wake up, wake up, from their winter's sleep, And lift their tiny heads. Come up to the warm, bright sunshine, Come up to find the light; 'Tis dark and chilly here below, Come up to the world so bright I Then upwards to the world they go, A long and weary way, Until at the end of their journey slow They burst into the day. Oh, how the streams are singing I Dancing their way along! To the sky above are winging The birds with happy song; The leaves are rustling in the trees, By dancing branches whirled; The grass is waving in the breeze;-- 'Tis Springtime's happy world. STORY OF BUZZY. W. H. S. To be told when a...
